

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE GOLDEN HYNDE

I

WITH the fruit of Aladdin's Garden clustering thick in her hold,
With rubies a-wash in her scuppers and her bilge a-blaze with gold,
A world in arms behind her to sever her heart from home,
The Golden Hynde drove onward, over the glittering foam.

II

If we go, as we came, by the Southward, we meet wi' the fleets of Spain!
'Tis a thousand to one against us; we'll turn to the West again;
We have captured a China pilot, his charts and his golden keys;

We'll sail to the golden Gateway, over the golden seas.

III

What shall we see as we sail there? Clusters of coral and palm, Oceans of silken slumber, measureless leagues of calm,
Islands of purple story, lit with the Westering gleam, Washed by the unknown whisper, dreaming the world-wide dream.

IV

There will be shores of sirens, with arms that beckon us near,
As they stand knee-deep in the foam-flowers, with perilous breasts and hair; Sweet is the rest they proffer; but what shall we gain of these

When we gaze on the golden Gateway that shines on the golden seas?

v

Wound in their white embraces, couched in the lustrous gloom,
Gazing ever to seaward thro' the broad magnolia bloom,
We should weary of all their kisses when, under the first white star,
Over the limitless ocean, the golden Gates unbar.

VI

White arms will strive to hold us; but we shall rise and go Down to the salt sea-beaches where the waves are whispering low:
White arms will plead in anguish as the sails fill out to the breeze,
And we turn to the golden Gateway that burns on the golden seas!

VII

We shall put out from shore then, out to the Western skies,
With the old despairing rapture and the sunset in our eyes!
What shall we gain of our going, what of the fading gleam,
What of the gathering darkness, what of the dying dream?

VIII

Only the unknown glory, only the hope deferred,
Only the wondrous whisper, only the unknown Word, Voice of the God that gave us billow and beam and breeze,
As we sail to the golden Gateway, over the golden seas.

AT DAWN

O Hesper-Phosphor, far away,

Shining, the first, the last white star,

Hear'st thou the strange, the ghostly cry,

That moan of an ancient agony

From purple forest to golden sky

Shivering over the breathless bay?

It is not the wind that wakes with the day;

For see, the gulls that wheel and call,

Beyond the tumbling white-topped bar,

Catching the sun-dawn on their wings,

Like snow-flakes or like rose-leaves fall,

Flutter and fall in airy rings;

And drift, like lilies ruffling into blossom

Upon some golden lake's unwrinkled bosom.

Are not the forest's deep-lashed fringes wet

With tears? Is not the voice of all regret

Breaking out of the dark earth's heart?
She too, she too, has loved and lost; and we —
We that remember our lost Arcady,
Have we not known, we too,
The primal greenwood's arch of blue,
The radiant clouds at sunrise curled
Around the brows of the golden world;
The marble temples, washed with dew,
To which with rosy limbs aflame
The violet-eyed Thalassian came,
Came, pitiless, only to display
How soon the youthful splendour dies away;
Came only to depart
Laughing across the grey-grown bitter sea;
For each man's life is earth's epitome,
And though the years bring more than aught
they take,
Yet might his heart and hers well break
Remembering how one prayer must still be vain,

's heart!
; and r
How one fair hope is dead,
One passion quenched, one glory fled
With those first loves that never come again.

How many years, how many generations,
Have heard that sigh in the dawn,
When the dark earth yearns to the unforgotten
nations

And the old loves withdrawn,
Old loves, old lovers, wonderful and unnumbered
As waves on the wine-dark sea.

'Neath the tall white towers of Troy and the temples that slumbered
In Thessaly?

From the beautiful palaces, from the miraculous portals,
The swift white feet are flown!
They were taintless of dust, the proud, the peerless Immortals

Breaking out of the dark earth's heart?
She too, she too, has loved and lost; and we —
We that remember our lost Arcady,
Have we not known, we too,
The primal greenwood's arch of blue,
The radiant clouds at sunrise curled
Around the brows of the golden world;
The marble temples, washed with dew,
To which with rosy limbs aflame
The violet-eyed Thalassian came,
Came, pitiless, only to display
How soon the youthful splendour dies away;
Came only to depart
Laughing across the grey-grown bitter sea;
For each man's life is earth's epitome,
And though the years bring more than aught
they take,
Yet might his heart and hers well break
Remembering how one prayer must still be vain,

How one fair hope is dead,
One passion quenched, one glory fled
With those first loves that never come again.

How many years, how many generations,
Have heard that sigh in the dawn,
When the dark earth yearns to the unforgotten
nations
And the old loves withdrawn,
Old loves, old lovers, wonderful and unnumbered
As waves on the wine-dark sea.
'Neath the tall white towers of Troy and the
temples that slumbered
In Thessaly?

From the beautiful palaces, from the miraculous portals,
The swift white feet are flown!
They were taintless of dust, the proud, the
peerless Immortals

As they sped to their loftier throne!
Perchance they are there, earth dreams, on the shores of Hesper,
Her rosy-bosomed Hours, Listening the wild fresh forest's enchanted whisper,
Crowned with its new strange flowers;
Listening the great new ocean's triumphant thunder
On the stainless unknown shore, While that perilous queen of the world's delight and wonder
Comes white from the foam once more.

When the mists divide with the dawn o'er those glittering waters,
Do they gaze over unoaded seas — Naiad and nymph and the woodland's rose-crowned daughters

And the Oceanides?

Do they sing together, perchance, in that diamond splendour,

That world of dawn and dew,

With eyelids twitching to tears and with eyes grown tender

The sweet old songs they knew,

The songs of Greece? Ah, with harp-strings mute do they falter

As the earth like a small star pales?

When the heroes launch their ship by the smoking altar

Does a memory lure their sails?

Far, far away, do their hearts resume the story

That never on earth was told,

When all those urgent oars on the waste of glory

Cast up its gold?

Are not the forest fringes wet

With tears? Is not the voice of all regret

Breaking out of the dark earth's heart?
She too, she too, has loved and lost; and though She turned last night in disdain
    Away from the sunset-embers,
From her soul she can never depart;
She can never depart from her pain.
Vainly she strives to forget;
Beautiful in her woe,
    She awakes in the dawn and remembers.

A SEVENTIETH BIRTHDAY

(IN HONOUR OF ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE)

(B. April 5, 1837)

I

HE needs no crown of ours, whose golden heart Poured out its wealth so freely in pure praise
Of others: him the imperishable bays
Crown, and on Sunium's height he sits apart:
He hears immortal greetings this great morn,
Fain would we bring, we also, all we may,
Some wayside flower of transitory bloom,
Frail tribute only born
To greet the gladness of this April day — Then waste on Death's dark wind its faint perfume.

II

Here, on this April day, the whole sweet Spring Speaks thro' his music only, or seems to speak;

And we that hear, with hearts uplift and weak,
What can we more than claim him for our king?
Here, on this April day (and many a time Shall Spring return and find him singing still) He is one with the world's great heart beyond the years,
One with the pulsing rhyme
Of tides that work some heavenly rhythmic will
And hold the secret of all human tears.

III

For he, the last of that immortal race
Whose music like a robe of living light Re-clothed each new-born age and made it bright
As with the glory of Love's transfiguring face, Reddened earth's roses, kindled the deep blue
Of England's radiant ever-singing sea,

Recalled the white Thalassian from the foam Woke the dim stars anew
And triumphed in the triumph of Liberty, We claim him; but he hath not here his home.

Not here! Round him to-day the clouds divide.
We know what faces thro' that rose-flushed air
Now bend above him — Shelley's face is there,
And Hugo's lit with more than kingly pride;
Replenished there with splendour the blind eyes
Of Milton bend from heaven to meet his own; Sappho is there crowned with those queenlier flowers
Whose graft outgrew our skies, His gift: Shakespeare leans earthward from his throne
With hands outstretched. He needs no crown of ours.

THE NET OF VULCAN

I

FROM peaks that clove the heavens asunder
The hunch-back god with sooty claws
Loomed o'er the night, a cloud of thunder,
And hurled the net of mortal laws;
It flew, and all the world grew dimmer;
Its blackness blotted out the stars,
Then fell across the rosy glimmer That told where Venus couched with Mars.

II

And, when the steeds that draw the morning
Spurned from their Orient hooves the spray,
All vainly soared the lavrock, warning
Those tangled lovers of the day:
Still with those twin white waves in blossom

Against the warrior's rock-broad breast,
The netted light of the foam-born bosom Breathed like a sea at rest.

And light was all that followed after,
Light the derision of the sky,
Light the divine Olympian laughter
Of kindlier gods in days gone by:
Low to her lover whispered Venus,
'The shameless net be praised for this —
When night herself no more could screen us
It snared us one more hour of bliss.'

ORPHEUS AND EURYDICE

I

CLOUD upon cloud, the purple pinewoods clung to the rich Arcadian mountains, Holy-sweet as a column of incense, where Eurydice roamed and sung :
All the hues of the gates of heaven flashed from The white enchanted fountains Where in the flowery glades of the forest the rivers that sing to Arcadia sprung.

White as a shining marble Dryad, supple and sweet as a rose in blossom,
Fair and fleet as a fawn that shakes the dew
from the fern at break of day, Wreathed with the clouds of her dusky hair that kissed and clung to her sun-bright bosom,

Down to the valley she came, and the sound of her feet was the bursting of flowers in May.

Down to the valley she came, for far and far below in the dreaming meadows Pleaded ever the Voice of voices, calling his love by her golden name;
So she arose from her home in the hills, and down through the blossoms that danced with their shadows,
Out of the blue of the dreaming distance,
down to the heart of her lover she came.

Red were the lips that hovered above her lips in the flowery haze of the June-day, Red as a rose through the perfumed mist of passion that reeled before her eyes; Strong the smooth young sunburnt arms that folded her heart to his heart in the noonday,

Strong and supple with throbbing sunshine under the blinding southern skies.

Ah, the kisses, the little murmurs, mad with pain for their phantom fleetness,

Mad with pain for the passing of love that lives, they dreamed — as we dream — for an hour!

Ah, the sudden tempest of passion, mad with pain for its oversweetness.

As petal by petal and pang by pang their love broke out into perfect flower.

Ah, the wonder as once he wakened, out of a dream of remembered blisses,

Couched in the meadows of dreaming blossom to feel, like the touch of a flower on his eyes,

Cool and fresh with the fragrant dews of dawn the touch of her light swift kisses, Shed from the shadowy rose of her face between his face and the warm blue skies.

II

Lost in his new desire
He dreamed away the hours;
His lyre
Lay buried in the flowers:
To whom the King of Heaven,
Apollo, lord of light
Had given Such beauty, love, and might:
Might, if he would, to slay
All evil dreams and pierce
The grey Veil of the Universe;

With love that holds in one Sacred and ancient bond
The sun
And all the vast beyond;

And beauty to enthrall .
The soul of man to heaven :
Yea, all
Such gifts was Orpheus given.

Yet in his dream's desire
He drowsed away the hours :
His lyre
Lay buried in the flowers.

Then in his wrath arose
Apollo, lord of light,
That shows
The wrong deed from the right;

And by what radiant laws O'erruling human needs
    The cause
To consequence proceeds;

How balanced is the sway
He gives each mortal doom;
    How day
Demands the atoning gloom:

How all good things await The soul that pays the price
    To fate
By equal sacrifice;

And how on him that sleeps
For less than labour's sake
    There creeps, Uncharmed, the Pythian snake.

III

Lulled by the wash of the feathery grasses, a sea with many a sun-swept billow, Heart to heart in the heart of the summer, lover by lover asleep they lay, Hearing only the whirring cicada that chirruped awhile at their popped pillow Faint and sweet as the murmur of men that laboured in villages far away.

Was not the menace indeed more silent? Ah, what care for labour and sorrow?
Gods in the meadows of moly and amaranth surely might envy their deep sweet bed Here where the butterflies troubled the lilies of peace, and took no thought for the morrow,
And golden-girdled bees made feast as over the lotos the soft sun spread.

Nearer, nearer the menace glided, out of the gorgeous gloom around them, Out of the poppy-haunted shadows deep in the heart of the purple brake; Till through the hush and the heat as they lay, and their own sweet listless dreams en-wound them, —
Mailed and mottled with hues of the grape-bloom suddenly, quietly, glided the snake.

Subtle as jealousy, supple as falsehood, diamond-headed and cruel as pleasure, Coil by coil he lengthened and glided, straight to the fragrant curve of her throat:
There in the print of the last of the kisses that still glowed red from the sweet long pressure, Fierce as famine and swift as lightning over the glittering lyre he smote.

IV

And over the cold white body of love and delight Orpheus arose in the terrible storm of his grief,

With quivering up-clutched hands, deadly and white,

And his whole soul wavered and shook like a wind-swept leaf:

As a leaf that beats on a mountain, his spirit in vain

Assaulted his doom and beat on the Gates of Death:

Then prone with his arms o'er the lyre he sobbed out his pain,

And the tense chords faintly gave voice to the pulse of his breath.

And he heard it and rose, once again, with the lyre in his hand,

And smote out the cry that his white-lipped sorrow denied :

And the grief's mad ecstasy swept o'er the summer-sweet land,

And gathered the tears of all Time in the rush of its tide.

There was never a love forsaken or faith for-sworn,

There was never a cry for the living or moan for the slain,

But was voiced in that great consummation of song; ay, and borne

To storm on the Gates of the land whence none cometh again.

Transcending the barriers of earth, comprehending them all,

He followed the soul of his loss with the night in his eyes;

And the portals lay bare to him there; and he heard the faint call Of his love o'er the rabble that wails by the river of sighs.

Yea, there in the mountains before him he knew it of old,
That portal enormous of gloom, he had seen it in dreams,
When the secrets of Time and of Fate through his harmonies rolled;
And behind it he heard the dead moan by their desolate streams.

And he passed through the Gates with the light and the cloud of his song, Dry-shod over Lethe he passed to the chasms of Hell;
And the hosts of the dead made mock at him, crying, how long

Have we dwelt in the darkness, oh fool, and shall evermore dwell?

Did our lovers not love us? the grey skulls hissed in his face;

Were our lips not red? Were these cavernous eyes not bright?

Yet us, whom the soft flesh clothed with such roseate grace,

Our lovers would loathe if we ever returned to their sight!

Oh then, through the soul of the Singer, a pity so vast

Mixed with his anguish that, smiting anew on his lyre,

He caught up the sorrows of hell in his utterance at last,

Comprehending the need of them all in his own great desire.

v

And they that were dead, in his radiant music, heard the moaning of doves in the olden Golden-girdled purple pinewood, heard the moan of the roaming sea;

Heard the chant of the soft-winged songsters, nesting now in the fragrant golden Olden haunted blossoming bowers of lovers that wandered in Arcady;

Saw the soft blue veils of shadow floating over the billowy grasses

Under the crisp white curling clouds that sailed and trailed through the melting blue;

Heard once more the quarrel of lovers above them pass, as a lark-song passes, Light and bright, till it vanished away in an eyebright heaven of silvery dew.

White as a dream of Aphrodite, supple and sweet as a rose in blossom,

Fair and fleet as a fawn that shakes the dew

from the fern at break of day;

Wreathed with the clouds of her dusky hair, that

kissed and clung to her sun-bright bosom,

On through the deserts of hell she came, and the brown air bloomed with the light of

May.

On through the deserts of hell she came; for over the fierce and frozen meadows

Pleaded ever the Voice of voices, calling his

love by her golden name;

So she arose from her grave in the darkness, and up through the wailing fires and shadows,

On by chasm and cliff and cavern, out of the horrors of death she came.

Then had she followed him, then had he won her, striking a chord that should echo for ever, Had he been steadfast only a little, nor paused in the great transcendent song; But ere they had won to the glory of day, he came to the brink of the flaming river And ceased, to look on his love a moment, a little moment, and over long.

VI

O'er Phlegethon he stood:
Below him roared and flamed
The flood
For utmost anguish named.

And lo, across the night,
The shining form he knew
With light
Swift footsteps upward drew.

Up through the desolate lands
She stole, a ghostly star,
    With hands
Outstretched to him afar.

With arms outstretched, she came In yearning majesty,
    The same
Royal Eurydice.

Up through the ghastly dead
She came, with shining eyes
    And red
Sweet lips of child-surprise.

Up through the wizened crowds
She stole, as steals the moon Through clouds
Of flowery mist in June.

He gazed: he ceased to smite
The golden-chorded lyre:

Delight

Consumed his heart with fire.

Though in that deadly land

His task was but half-done,

His hand

Drooped, and the fight half won.

He saw the breasts that glowed,

The fragrant clouds of hair;

They flowed

Around him like a snare.

O'er Phlegethon he stood,

For utmost anguish named:

The flood

Below him roared and flamed

Out of his hand the lyre

Suddenly slipped and fell:

The fire

Acclaimed it into hell.

The night grew dark again :

There came a bitter cry

Of pain,

Oh, Love, once more I die !

And lo, the earth-dawn broke,

And like a wraith she fled :

He woke

Alone: his love was dead.

He woke on earth: the day

Shone coldly: at his side

There lay

The body of his bride.

Only now when the purple vintage bubbles and winks in the autumn glory,

Only now when the great white oxen drag the weight of the harvest home,

Sunburnt labourers, under the star of the sunset, sing as an old-world story How two pale and thwarted lovers ever through Arcady still must roam.

Faint as the silvery mists of morning over the peaks that the noonday parches, On through the haunts of the gloaming muskrose, down to the rivers that glisten below,
Ever they wander from meadow to pinewood, under the whispering woodbine arches, Faint as the mist of the dews of the dusk when violets dream and the moon-winds blow.

Though the golden lute of Orpheus gathered the splendours of earth and heaven, All the golden greenwood notes and all the chimes of the changing sea,

Old men over the fires of winter murmur again that he was not given The steadfast heart divine to rule that infinite freedom of harmony.

Therefore he failed, say they; but we, that have no wisdom, can only remember How through the purple perfumed pinewoods white Eurydice roamed and sung:
How through the whispering gold of the wheat, where the poppy burned like a crimson ember,
Down to the valley in beauty she came, and under her coming the flowers up-sprung.

Down to the valley she came, for far and far below in the dreaming meadows Pleaded ever the Voice of voices, calling his
love by her golden name;

So she arose from her home in the hills, and down through the blossoms that danced with their shadows

Out of the blue of the dreaming distance,
down to the heart of her lover she came.

FROM THE SHORE

I

Love, so strangely lost and found,
Love, beyond these Gates of Death,
Love, immortally re-crowned,
Love, who swayest this mortal breath,
Sweetlier to thy lover's ear
Steals the tale that ne'er was told:
Bright-eyes, ah, thine arms are near,
Nearer now than e'er of old.

II

When on earth thy hands were mine,
Mine to hold for evermore,
Oft we watched the sunset shine
Lonelier from this wave-beat shore;
Pent in prison-cells of clay

Time had power on thee and me,
Thou and heaven are one to-day
One with earth and sky and sea.

III

Indivisible and one
Beauty hath unlocked the gate,
Oped the portals of the sun,
Burst the bars of Time and Fate:
Violets in the dawn of Spring
Hold the secret of thine eyes;
Lilies bare their breasts and fling Scents of thee from Paradise.

IV

Brooklets have thy talk by rote,
Thy farewells array the West;
Fur that clasped thee round the throat Leaps — a squirrel — to its nest:
Backward from a sparkling eye,

Half-forgotten jests return Where the rabbit lollops by Hurry-scurry through the fern.

V

Roses where I lonely pass,
Brush my brow and breathe thy kiss;
Zephyrs whispering through the grass
Lure me on from bliss to bliss;
Here thy robe is rustling close,
There thy fluttering lace is blown;
All the tide of beauty flows
Tributary to thine own.

VI

Birds that sleek their shining throats
Capture every curve from thee,
All their golden warbled notes —
Fragments of thy melody — Crowding, clustering, one by one,

Build it upward, spray by spray,
Till the lavrock in the sun Pours thy rapture down the day.

VII

Silver birch and purple pine,
Crumpled fern and crimson rose Flash to feel their beauty thine, Clasp and fold thee, warm and close;
Every beat and gleam of wings
Holds thee in its bosom furled,
All that chatters, laughs and sings Darts thy sparkle round the world.

VIII

Love, so strangely lost and found,
Love, beyond these Gates of Death,
Love, immortally re-crowned,
Love, who swayest this mortal breath,

Sweetlier to thy lover's ear

Steals the tale that ne'er was told:

Bright-eyes, ah, thine arms are near,

Nearer now than e'er of old.

I

O HEDGES white with laughing may,
O meadows where we met,
This heart of mine must break to-day Unless ye, too, forget.

II

Breathe not so sweet, breathe not so sweet,
But swiftly let me pass
Across the fields that felt her feet
In the old time that was!

III

A year ago, but one brief year,
O happy flowering land,
We wandered here and whispered there
And hand was warm in hand.

O crisp white clouds beyond the hill,
O lavrock in the skies,
Why do ye all remember still Her bright uplifted eyes?

Red heather on the windy moor,
Wild thyme beside the way,
White jasmine by the cottage door,
Harden your hearts to-day.

VI

Smile not so kind, smile not so kind,
Thou happy, haunted place,
Or thou wilt strike these poor eyes blind
With her remembered face.

ON A RAILWAY PLATFORM

A DRIZZLE of drifting rain

And a blurred white lamp o'er head,
That shines as my love will shine again,
In the world of the dead.

Round me the wet black night,

And, afar in the limitless gloom,
Crimson and green, two blossoms of light,
Two stars of doom.

But the night of death is a-flare

With a torch of back-blown fire
And the coal-black deeps of the quivering air Rend for my soul's desire.

Leap, heart, for the pulse and the roar

And the lights of the streaming train

That leaps with the heart of thy love once more Out of the mist and the rain ;

For the thousand panes of light
And the faces pale with mist Streaming out of the desolate night In ruby and amethyst ;

Out of the desolate years
The thundering pageant flows ;
But I see no more than a window of tears
Which her face has turned to a rose.

AN OLD SONG ENDED

How should I your true love know

From another one? —

By his cockle-hat and staff

And his sandal shoon. —

Wherefore hath he roamed so far,

Lady, from your hand? —

Love's a pilgrim, and he comes

Out of Holy Land. —

Nay; but he is dead, lady,

He is dead and gone: —

Seek his grave and lay your face

Down upon the stone. —

Shall I find him if he sleep

In a nameless grave

Where over many and many an one

The tall wet grasses wave? —

Breathe my name whereas you go.

If you hear a sound

Struggling like a stifled cry

Underneath the ground,

Whisper but a word to him,

Tell him my despair:

If he riseth from the dead,

Then my love is there.

LOVE'S GHOST

I

THY house is dark and still: I stand once more Beside the marble door.

It opens as of old! Thy pale, pale face Peers thro' the narrow space.

Thy hands are mine, thy hands are mine to hold,
Just as of old.

II

'Hush! hush! or God will hear us! Ah, speak
low

As Love spake long ago.'

'Sweet, sweet, are these thine arms, thy breast, thy hair

Assuaging my despair,

Assuaging the long thirst, quenching the tears

Of all these years?

III

'Thy house is deep and still: God cannot hear;

Sweet, have no fear!

Are not thy cold lips crushed against my kiss?

Love gives us this,

Not God'; but 'Ah,' she moans, 'God hears us!

Speak,

Speak low, hide cheek on cheek.'

IV

O, then what eager whisperings, hoarded long,

Too sweet for any song,

What treasured news to tell, what hopes, what fears,

Gleaned from the barren years,

What raptures wrung from out the heart of pain,

What wild farewells again.

V

Whose pity is this? Ah, quick, one kiss!

Once more

Closes the marble door!
I grope here in the darkness all alone!
Across the cold white stone,
Over thy tomb, a sudden starlight gleams:
Death gave me this — in dreams.

NIOBE

I

How like the sky she bends above her child,
One with the great horizon of her pain!
No sob from our low seas where woe runs wild,
No weeping cloud, no momentary rain,
Can mar the heaven-high visage of her grief,
That frozen anguish, proud, majestic, dumb!
She stoops in pity above the labouring earth,
Knowing how fond, how brief
Is all its hope, past, present and to come,
She stoops in pity, and yearns to assuage its dearth.

II

Through that fair face the whole dark universe Speaks, as a thorn-tree speaks thro' one white flower;

And all those wrenched Promethean souls that curse

The gods, but cannot die before their hour, Find utterance in her beauty. That fair head Bows over all earth's graves. It was her cry Men heard in Rama when the twisted ways
With children's blood ran red!
Her silence utters all the sea would sigh;
And, in her face, the whole earth's anguish prays.

III

It is the pity, the pity of human love That strains her face, upturned to meet the doom,
And her deep bosom, like a snow-white dove Frozen upon its nest, ne'er to resume
Its happy breathing o'er the golden brace Whose fostering was her death. Ay, death alone

Can break the anguished horror of that spell!

The sorrow on her face
Is sealed; the living flesh is turned to stone:
She knows all, all that Life and Time can tell.

IV

Ah, yet, her woman's love, so vast, so tender;
Her woman's body, hurt by every dart;
Braving the thunder, still, still hide the slender Soft frightened child beneath her mighty heart!

She is all one mute immortal cry, one brief Infinite pang of such victorious pain That she transcends the heavens and bows them down!

The majesty of grief
Is hers, and her dominion must remain Eternal. God nor man usurps that crown.

THE LAST OF THE TITANS

OVER what seemed a gulf of glimmering sea, Huger than hugest Himalay arose
Atlas, on weary shoulders heaving dark
The burden of the heavens, the heavy broad Empurpled floors o' the roseate golden realm Unseen, where gods like living light in light Flowed and forgot the sorrows of the world.
And his drooped head was bowed into the gloom,
Bowed like a mountain, crushing on his breast
A clotted beard of many pinewoods. Dark, Immeasurably dark his body's bulk Sank through the gulfs of Space; but pale as death
His face gleamed over Africa, his face,
A mask of living marble, bending down
Eyes like deep wells of soft compassionate gloom.

His cheeks were furrowed and writhen like rain-washed crags

With fierce ravines of long and age-long tears
Whereon the pale procession of the stars
That round him moved in mockery sometimes cast A dreary light of anguish; but sometimes The white clouds glimmering crept to comfort him,

And to be comforted, by shutting out
The keen oppression of those glittering ranks
And dread eternities. They crept like sheep Round some Titanic shepherd. In his breast
They nestled; but whene'er his mighty hands
In love would draw them closer, they escaped, Eluded the fond clasp,
And, ever drawing nigh him all night long,
Wandered away for ever as they came.
Beneath him, like a tawny panther-skin
The great Sahara slept: beyond it lay,

Parcelled and plotted out like tiny fields,
The pryncedoms and the kingdoms of this earth,
Mountains like frozen wrinkles on a sea,
And seas like rain-pools in a rutted road Dwindling beneath his loneliness. Above
The chariots of ten thousand thousand suns Conspired to make him lonelier and rolled Their flaming wheels remote, so that they seemed, E'en Alioth and Fomalhaut, no more Than dust of diamonds in the abysmal gloom.
So from a huger loneliness he gazed
Over the world where, faint as morning mists Drifting thro' shadowy battles on the hills, Drifting thro' many a pageant touched with red,
Cities of men and nations passed away.

But once, from out a crimson-glooming dawn,
A light appeared as of a distant star Flying towards him, growing as it came;

Till now it seemed a naked youth up-borne
On silver dove-winged sandals, like a god.
Then, then as moans the thunder through the night,
The heart of Atlas moaned — ‘Why art thou come
To look upon my sorrow? Nay, I know,
Perseus, thou son of the everlasting gods,
I know thee who thou art! Why comest thou thus
To mock me with the sight of that high hope Which Atlas never knew? Why comest thou thus
In youth and beauty through the crimson dawn?’
And Perseus answered gently as a man Speaking to one in pain: ‘I did not come To mock thee, lord: I come to seek and pluck
The heart from out the land without a name,
The land without any order, where the light

Is even as darkness. I would seek and slay Medusa — her whose foul enchantments draw Man's heart into the abominable pit Strangled and' . . . then that other — 'Many a man,

Yea, many a hero have I seen go by The glory of whose face was like a god's Upon that quest; but I have never seen
The face of one returning. Knowest thou not So terrible is the tempest of her beauty
That if thine eyes but look upon her face Thy flesh and soul shall stiffen into stone.
Her breasts are girt about with triple brass Against all mortal steel.' And Perseus — 'Yea, I know; but she — the brightest queen of heaven —

Athena, gave me mine immortal sword, The sword of knowledge that can shear through brass

And triple steel as lightning cleaves the night.
Athena gave me mine immortal shield,
Theshield of truth: and, mirrored in that gleam,
The face of even Medusa hath no power
To hurt me. I will look not on her face Save in the shield of truth: I shall not smite her Save with the sword of knowledge, bathed in heaven.

I pray thee show me now that bitter road,
My death-road as thou sayest; for I will go
And triumph and return.' And Atlas said
'Yea; if I show thee, Perseus, wilt thou give One grace if thou return, one gift of grace
To me, world-wearied: I desire to rest.
I am weary of bearing this exceeding weight
Of gloom eternal, weary of searching heaven
With prayers for pity, weary of knowledge, weary
Of watching little men a little hour

Beneath the pondering of prodigious heavens Contend like ants for little mole-hill realms
And glow-worm glories, crowns contemptible;
But thou can'st give me peace, if thou return.
Nay, Perseus, I will tell thee when thou comest;
But swear as thou dost love thy fatherland Thou'lt not deny me this if thou return.'
And Perseus swore that oath with steadfast eyes,
And Atlas pointed out the baleful road
Across the shapeless land without a name.

White as a snow-flake on the weird black wings
Of many a wind fulfilled with hideous dreams, Misshapen horrors of the ultimate gloom,
He flew, till as they gaped with threatening jaws
Of flame around his path he donned the helm Wrung from the realms of Pluto, the dark helm Wrought in the lands of death, which whoso wears

Is bodiless and invisible as the soul
That hath gone over Lethe. Him no more Can death affright nor mortal doom affray.

League after league he sped till from the depths,
Up through the darkness came a great soft sound
Of breathing, like the breathing of the sea;
And, shuddering, he upheld the polished shield
And gazed on it as on some magic moon
Wherein he saw the glimmering world below Mirrored; beheld what none hath ever seen And lived, since the beginning of the world.
'O, horrible,' he moaned, 'O, beautiful, Beautiful hell'; for in the shield he saw Upon what seemed a plain of steaming filth
A Titan woman, lying supine and white;
White as a fallen column of some huge Temple of Ombos, hugest City of earth,
Her body a field of lilies and her breasts

Two snowy hillocks tipt with crimson dawn;
Her flank a marble buttress beautiful Couched in the foul abyss; her regal face Calm with the leonine languor of the Sphinx.
On either side, close huddled to her flank
And in the steam through which she glimmered pale

A dark shape, indistinguishable bulk
Of horror, couched with laps and folds of skin Like those that wrap Behemoth; and sometimes,
Like the fierce flashing of a wrecker's fire,
There came a glint of brazen claws and wings.
All round them like a forest swept the deep Empurpled masses of her tangled hair.
Anon with slow and sleepy crimson lips, Bright as with blood of heroes, her face turned Smiling to greet each horror with a kiss;
And, as she turned, her beauty's palace heaved
One rosy marble buttress from the filth

Luxuriously a little, the other sank
And wallowed deeper. Suddenly her eyes Opened in childlike innocence. The dark Mass of her hair shook round her like a sea.
Its purple clouds all clotted and congealed!
And lo, the primal serpents of the slime
Huger than Python, hissing, upward curled
And floated round her, coil on heavy coil, Beautiful in their horror as they cast Shadows like grape-bloom o'er her breasts' white snow

And swayed their bloated throats: and then a voice

From distances beyond the abode of gods
Cried, *This is She, the Abominable, the Queen Of dissolute chaos, knowing not evil or good,
Queen of all dark adulteries, Mother of shame,
Mother of falsehood, Mother of treachery, Mother of jealousy, Mother of blood and tears,*

Queen of the ultimate darkness. At that voice Young Perseus gripped the bright immortal sword

Which grave grey-eyed Athena gave him, gazed Steadfastly on the shield and floated down Quietly as a star-beam into hell.

Then, with one prayer to the everlasting gods,
Across the roseate hollow of her throat
He smote! The immortal blade like light thro' darkness

Flashed, and the blood rolled hissing o'er the filth;

And wheresoe'er it curled a serpent rose Hissing a-gape; then with one hideous clap
Of thunder those two monstrous bulks arose, Mountainous, like two foul prodigious swine From out their wallowing beds i' the clinging mire;

And from what seemed their eyes a ruddy light

Of vengeance flashed, as of wild crimson torches Far-sunken in a thick and savage wood,
Yet imminent; but Perseus, with one hand Clutching the tangled gloom of that dire head Soared upward and the silver sandals bore
The hero and his burden far away.

And though with heavy clang of brazen wings
The Gorgons followed, soon they dropped behind

And loomed no larger than two carrion flies Against the red horizon; and at last Decayed from sight. And onward Perseus came Triumphantly, a light upon his face
As of a god returning, till he saw
The mighty shoulders of the world-worn king Atlas, above what seemed a glimmering sea.
And up to the grim worn face, furrowed with tears

He sped, according to his vow; and Atlas

Moaned like a distant thunder, 'Art thou come,
Perseus, thou son of the everlasting gods?
Lift up the head and let me look upon it;
For I desire to rest.' And Perseus raised
The cold head of Medusa, which no man Had seen and lived; and Atlas looked With weary hungering eyes upon her face.
And lo, a sleep of stone, an iron rest
And everlasting quiet sealed his eyes.
His cheeks were furrowed and writhen rain-washed crags,
And his drooped head was bowed into the gloom,
A granite mountain, crushing on its breast A clotted beard of many pinewoods. Still Round him the clouds like wandering flocks of sheep
Around some mighty shepherd creeping close Nestled against his breast; and all was peace.

THE RIDE OF PHAËTHON

I

FORTH, from the portals, flow the four immortal steeds

Tossing the splendour of their manes, While the dazzled Phaëthon reels o'er the flashing golden wheels
Grasping the fourfold reins.

II

Ah, beneath the burning hooves how the darkness cowers down

As the great steeds mount and soar;
How the twilight springs away from the wheels like spray
And the night like a battle-broken host is driven before.

III

And swifter now, ah, swift, as the eight great shoulders lift

And leap up the rolling sky,

And the steeds in whitest glory ramp and trample on the night

And the quivering haunches thrust, they mount and fly.

IV

Ah, the beauty of their scorn! How the blood-red nostrils burn,

Breathing out the dawn and the day;

How the long cloud ranks foam in fury from their flanks

And the heavens for their hooves make way.

V

And higher now and higher, thro' a sea of cloudy fire

The chariot sways and swings,

And the heart of Phaëthon leaps, as up the radiant steeps
They surge, and drunk with triumph, he lifts his head and sings.

VI

He sings, he sways and reels o'er the flashing golden wheels,
For he sees far, far below,
The little dwindling earth and the land that gave him birth
And the Northlands white with snow.

VII

And he shakes the maddened reins o'er the gleaming seas and plains
And the chariot swings and sways, Swifter, swifter he would fly than the Master of the sky,
The Lord of the sunbeams and bays.

VIII

And each high immortal steed that had never known the need Of Apollo's lash or goad, Tossed the cataract of its mane o'er its quivering croup again
And ramped on the sun-bright road.

IX

*Beautiful, insolent, fierce,
For an instant, a whirlwind of radiance,
Tossing their manes,
Rampant over the dazzled universe
They struggled, while Phaëthon, Phaëthon tugged at the reins.*

X

Then, like a torrent, a tempest of splendour, a hurricane rapture of wrath and derision Down they galloped, a great white thunder of glory, down the terrible sky;

Till earth with her rivers and seas and meadows broadened, and filled up the field of their vision

And mountains leapt from the plains to meet them, and all the forests and fields drew nigh.

XI

All the bracken and grass of the mountains flamed and the valleys of corn were wasted, All the blossoming forests of Africa withered and shrivelled beneath their flight; Then, then first, those ambrosial Edens of old by the wheels of the Sun were blasted, Leaving a dread Sahara, lonely, burnt and blackened to greet the night.

XII

Upward they swerved and swooped once more, the great white steeds, outstretched at the gallop,

The round earth dwindled beneath their flight, the mighty chariot swayed and swung

Under the feet of the charioteer, it swung and swayed as a storm-swept shallop

Tosses and leaps in the seas, and Phaëthon, cowering, close to the sides of it clung.

XIII

For now to the stars, to the stars, they surged, and the earth was a dwindling gleam thereunder,

Yea, now to the home of the Father of gods, and he rose in the wrath that none can quell, Beholding the mortal charioteer, and the rolling heavens were rent with his thunder, And Phaëthon, smitten, reeled from the chariot! Backward and out of it, headlong he fell.

XIV

Down, down, down, down from the glittering heights of the firmament hurled

Like a falling star, in a circle of fire, down the sheer abysm of doom,

Down to the hiss and the heave of the seas far out on the ultimate verge of the world,

That leapt with a roar to meet him, he fell, and they covered him o'er with their glorious gloom,

Covered him deep with their rolling gloom,
Their depths of pitiful gloom.

THE EMPIRE-BUILDERS

Who are the Empire-builders? They Whose desperate arrogance demands
A self-reflecting power to sway
A hundred little selfless lands?
Lord God of battles, ere we bow
To these and to their soulless lust,
Let fall thy thunders on us now
And strike us equal to the dust.

Before the stars in heaven were made
Our great Commander led us forth;
And now the embattled lines are laid
To East, to West, to South, to North;
According as of old He planned
We take our station in the field,

Nor dare to dream we understand
The splendour of the swords we wield.

We know not what the Soul intends That lives and moves behind our deeds;
We wheel and march to glorious ends
Beyond the common soldier's needs:
And some are raised to high rewards,
And some by regiments are hurled
To die upon the opposing swords
And sleep — forgotten by the world.

And not where navies churn the foam,
Nor called to fields of fierce emprise,
In many a country cottage-home.
The Empire-builder lives and dies:
Or through the roaring street he goes
A lean and weary City slave
The conqueror of a thousand foes
Who walks, unheeded, to his grave.

Leaders unknown of hopes forlorn Go past us in the daily mart,
With many a shadowy crown of thorn
And many a kingly broken heart:
Though England's banner overhead Ever the secret signal flew,
We only see its Cross is red
As children see the skies are blue.

For all are Empire-builders here,
Whose hearts are true to heaven and home
And, year by slow revolving year, Fulfil the duties as they come;
So simple seems the task, and yet
Many for this are crucified;
Ay, and their brother-men forget
The simple wounds in palm and side.

For hearts that to their home are true
Where'er the tides of power may flow,

Have built a kingdom great and new Which Time nor Fate shall overthrow;
These are the Empire-builders, these Annex where none shall say them nay,
Beyond the world's uncharted seas,
Realms that can never pass away.

NELSON'S YEAR — 1905

I

'New Year, be good to England!'

This year, a hundred years ago,
The world attended, breathless, on the gathering pomp of war,
While England and her deathless dead,
with all their mighty hearts aglow, Swept onward like the dawn of doom to triumph at Trafalgar;
Then the world was hushed to wonder
As the cannon's dying thunder Broke out again in muffled peals across the heaving sea,
And home the Victor came at last,
Home, home, with England's flag half-mast,

That never dipped to foe before, on Nelson's Victory.

II

God gave this year to England;
And what God gives He takes again; God gives us life, God gives us death: our victories have wings.

He gives us love and in its heart He hides the whole world's heart of pain!
We gain by loss: impartially the eternal balance swings!

Ay; in the fire we cherish
Our thoughts and dreams may perish;
Yet shall it burn for England's sake triumphant as of old!

What sacrifice could gain for her
Our own shall still maintain for her And hold the gates of freedom wide that take no keys of gold.

III

God gave this year to England;
Her eyes are far too bright for tears
Of sorrow; by her silent dead she kneels, too proud for pride;
Their blood, their love, have bought her right to claim the new imperial years In England's name for Freedom, in whose love her children died;
In whose love, though hope may dwindle,
Love and brotherhood shall kindle Between the striving nations as a choral song takes fire,
Till new hope, new faith, new wonder Cleave the clouds of doubt asunder,
And speed the union of mankind in one divine desire.

IV

Hasten the Kingdom, England;
This year across the listening world

There came a sound of mingled tears where victory and defeat

Clasped hands; and Peace — among the dead — stood wistfully, with white wings furled,

Knowing the strife was idle; for the night and morning meet,

Yet there is no disunion

In heaven's divine communion

As through the gates of twilight the harmonious morning pours;

Ah, God speed that grander morrow

When the world's divinest sorrow

Shall show how Love stands knocking at the world's unopened doors.

v

Hasten the Kingdom, England!

Look up across the narrow seas,

a

Across the great white nations to thy dark imperial throne

Where now three hundred million souls attend on thine august decrees

Ah, bow thine head in humbleness, the Kingdom is thine own:

Not for the pride or power

God gave thee this in dower;

But, now the West and East have met and wept their mortal loss,

Now that their tears have spoken

And the long dumb spell is broken,

Is it nothing that thy banner bears the red eternal cross?

VI

Ay! Lift the flag of England;

And lo, that Eastern cross is there,

Veiled with a hundred meanings as our English eyes are veiled;

Yet to the grander dawn we move oblivious of the sign we bear, Oblivious of the heights we climb until the last is scaled;
Then with all the earth before us
And the great cross floating o'er us We shall break the sword we forged of old, so weak we were and blind;
While the inviolate heaven discloses England's Rose of all the roses Dawning wide and ever wider o'er the kingdom of mankind.

VII

Hasten the Kingdom, England;
For then all nations shall be one;
One as the ordered stars are one that sing upon their way,
One with the rhythmic glories of the swinging sea and the rolling sun,

One with the flow of life and death, the tides of night and day;
    One with all dreams of beauty,
    One with all laws of duty;
One with the weak and helpless while the one sky burns above;
    Till eyes by tears made glorious Look up at last victorious And lips that starved break open in one song of life and love.

VIII

‘New Year, be good to England;’
    And when the Spring returns again Rekindle in our English hearts the universal Spring,
    That we may wait in faith upon the former
    and the latter rain, Till all waste places burgeon and the wildernesses sing;

Pour the glory of thy pity
Through the dark and troubled city; Pour the splendour of thy beauty over wood and meadow fair;
May the God of battles guide thee
And the Christ-child walk beside thee With a word of peace for England in the dawn of Nelson's Year.

IN TIME OF WAR

I

TO-NIGHT o'er Bagshot heath the purple heather Rolls like dumb thunder to the splendid West;
And mighty ragged clouds are massed together Above the scarred old common's broken breast;

And there are hints of blood between the boulders,
Red glints of fiercer blossom, bright and bold;
And round the shaggy mounds and sullen shoulders
The gorse repays the sun with savage gold.

And now, as in the West the light grows holy,
And all the hollows of the heath grow dim,

Far off, a sulky rumble rolls up slowly Where guns at practice growl their evening hymn.

And here and there in bare clean yellow spaces
The print of horse-hoofs like an answering cry Strikes strangely on the sense from lonely places Where there is nought but empty heath and sky.

The print of warlike hoofs, where now no figure Of horse or man along the sky's red rim Breaks on the low horizon's rough black rigour To make the gorgeous waste less wild and grim;

Strangely the hoof-prints strike, a Crusoe's wonder,
Framed with sharp furze amongst the footless fells

A menace and a mystery, rapt asunder,
As if the whole wide world contained nought else, —

Nought but the grand despair of desolation Between us and that wild, how far, how near, Where, clothed with thunder, nation grapples nation,
And Slaughter grips the clay-cold hand of Fear.

II

And far above the purple heath the sunset stars awaken,
And ghostly hosts of cloud across the West begin to stream,
And all the low soft winds with muffled cannonades are shaken,
And all the blood-red blossom draws aloof into a dream:

A dream — no more — and round the dream the clouds are curled together;

A dream of two great stormy hosts embattled in the sky;

For there against the low red heavens each purple clump of heather Becomes a serried host of spears around a battle-cry;

Becomes the distant battle-field or brings the dream so near it

That, almost, as the purple smoke around them reels and swims,

A thousand grey-lipped faces flash — ah, hark, the heart can hear it —

The sharp command, the clash of steel, the sudden sough of limbs.

And through the purple thunders there are silent shadows creeping

With murderous gleams of light, and then — a mighty leaping roar

Where foe and foe are met; and then — a long low sound of weeping

As Death laughs out from sea to sea, another fight is o'er.

Another fight — but ah, how much is over?
Night descending

Draws o'er the scene her ghastly moon-shot veil with piteous hands;

But all around the bivouac-glare the shadowy pickets wending

See sights, hear sounds that only war's own madness understands.

No circle of the accursed dead where dreaming Dante wandered,

No city of death's eternal dole could match this mortal world

Where men, before the living soul and quivering flesh are sundered,
Through all the bestial shapes of pain to one wide grave are hurled.

But in the midst for those who dare beyond the fringe to enter
Be sure one kingly figure lies with pale and blood-soiled face,
And round his brows a ragged crown of thorns;
and in the centre
Of those pale folded hands and feet the sigil of his grace.

See, how the pale limbs, marred and scarred in love's lost battle, languish;
See how the splendid passion still smiles quietly from his eyes; .
Come, come and see a king indeed, who triumphs in his anguish,

Who conquers here in utter loss beneath the eternal skies.

For unto lips so deadly calm what answer shall be given?

Oh pale, pale king so deadly still beneath the unshaken stars,

Who shall deny thy kingdom here, though heaven and earth were riven

With the last roar of onset in the world's intestine wars?

All round him reeks the obscene red hell — the scream of haggled horses,

The curse, the moan, the tossing arms, the hideous twisted forms,

Where, as the surgeons call up life's last pitiful resources,

The darkness heaves around them like a mass of mangled worms.

'Life, doctor, life!' 'Be wise; you'd better die: 'twill soon be over,' —

The blackened trunk drops guttering back, the mouth is dumb again:

'What use were life to you, my lad? she wouldn't know her lover,

And cruelty here is pity's best — to put you out of pain.'

And far away in lonely homes the lamp of hope is burning,

All night the white-faced women wait with aching eyes of prayer,

All night the little children dream of father's glad returning;

All night he lies beneath the stars and — dreams no more out there.

Only the senseless clay-cold hand may clasp some crumpled letter, —

A lantern — see — the big round scrawl, the child's long-studied phrase

'When Dadda comes again . . . his girl will try so much much better:

She'll be much taller, too; and much more grown up in her ways.'

The laugh is Death's; he laughs as erst o'er hours that England cherished,

'Count up, count up the stricken homes that wail the first-born son,

Count by your starved and fatherless the tale of what hath perished;

Then gather with your foes and ask if you — or I — have won.'

III

O'er Bagshot heath it rolls, the old old story, —

The great moon dawns; the sunset dies away;

Year strengthens year as glory kindles glory
From its own sad procession of decay.

When shall the sun-dawn of the perfect nation,
Rise pure and white above the blood-red sea;
When shall war die and by death's new creation Begin the long-sought world-wide harmony?

Nearer, still nearer creeps the light we hope for,
Yet still eludes our war-worn aching eyes:
Nearer, still nearer, steals the truth we grope for,
Yet, as we think to grasp it, fades and flies.

The world rolls on; and love and peace are mated:
Still on the breast of England, like a star,
The blood-red lonely heath blows, consecrated,
A brooding practice-ground for blood-red war.

Yet is there nothing out of tune with Nature There, where the skylark showers his earliest song,

Where sun and wind have moulded every feature,
And one world-music bears each note along.

There many a brown-winged kestrel swoops or hovers

In poised and patient quest of his own prey;
And there are fern-clad glens where happy lovers
May kiss the murmuring summer noon away.

There, as the primal earth was — all is glorious Perfect and wise and wonderful in view Of that great heaven through which we rise victorious

O'er all that strife and change and death can do.

No nation yet has risen o'er earth's first nature;
Though love illumed each individual mind, Still, like some dark half-formed primeval creature

The fierce mob crawled a thousand years behind.

Still on the standards of the great World-Powers Lion and bear and eagle sullenly brood,
Whether the slow folds flap o'er halcyon hours
Or stream tempestuously o'er fields of blood.

By war's red evolution we have risen Far, since fierce Erda chose her conquering few,
And out of Death's red gates and Time's grey prison
They burst, elect from battle, tried and true, Tempered like sword-blades; but life's vast procession
Has passed beyond the help of war's wild day,
The day where now a world in retrogression Goes hurrying down the broad and hopeless way.

For now Death mocks at youth and love and glory,

Chivalry slinks behind his loaded mines,
With meaner murderous lips War tells her story,
And round her cunning brows no laurel shines.

And here to us the eternal charge is given To rise and make our low world touch God's high:
To hasten God's own kingdom, Man's own
heaven,
And teach Love's grander army how to die.

No kingdom then, no long-continuing city
Shall e'er again be stablished by the sword;
No blood-bought throne defy the powers of pity,
No despot's crown outweigh one helot's word.

Imperial England, breathe thy marching orders:
The great host waits; the end, the end is close,
When earth shall know thy peace in all her borders,
And all her deserts blossom with thy Rose.

Princedom and peoples rise and flash and perish

As the dew passes from the flowering thorn;

Yet the one Kingdom that our dreams still cherish

Lives in a light that blinds the world's red morn.

Hasten the Kingdom, England, the days darken;

We would not have thee slacken watch or ward,

Nor doff thine armour till the whole world
hearken,

Nor till Time bid thee lay aside the sword.

Hasten the Kingdom; hamlet, heath, and city,

We are all at war, one bleeding bulk of pain;

Little we know; but one thing—by God's pity—

We know, and know all else on earth is vain.

We know not yet how much we dare, how little;

We dare not dream of peace; yet, as at need,

England, God help thee, let no jot or tittle
Of Love's last law go past thee without heed.

Who saves his life shall lose it! The great ages Bear witness — Rome and Babylon and Tyre
Cry from the dust-stopped lips of all their sages,
There is no hope if man can climb no higher.

England, by God's grace set apart to ponder
A little while from battle, ah, take heed, Keep watch, keep watch, beside thy sleeping
thunder;
Call down Christ's pity while those others bleed;

Waken the God within thee, while the sorrow
Of battle surges round a distant shore, While Time is thine, lest on some deadly morrow
The moving finger write — but thine no more.

Little we know — but though the advancing æons

Win every painful step by blood and fire, Though tortured mouths must chant the world's great pæans,
And martyred souls proclaim the world's desire;

Though war be nature's engine of rejection,
Soon, soon, across her universal verge
The great surviving host of Time's election Shall into God's diviner light emerge.

Hasten the Kingdom, England, queen and mother;

Little we know of all Time's works and ways; Yet this, this, this is sure: we need none other

Knowledge or wisdom, hope or aim or praise,

But to keep this one stormy banner flying

In this one faith that none shall e'er dis-prove,

Then drive the embattled world before thee, crying,

There is one Emperor, whose name is Love.

TO ENGLAND IN 1907

(A PRAYER THAT SHE MIGHT SPEAK FOR PEACE)

I

Now is thy foot set on the splendid way!
Hold this hour fast, though yet the skies be grey:
Lift up thy voice to greet the perfect day, Speak, England, speak across the trembling sea.

II

E'en now the grandest dawn that ever rose
Is flooding heaven with glory: the light grows White as a star where thy keen helmet glows Fronting the morn that sets all nations free.

III

Speak, from thine island throne! Here, in thy Gate,
Now, for thy voice alone, the nations wait:

Speak, with the heart that made and keeps thee great,
Speak the great word of peace from sea to sea.

IV

The nations wait, scarce knowing what they need:
Cold cunning claims their ears for lust and greed!
The poor and weak, with struggling hands that bleed
Pray to thee now that thou wilt set them free.

V

Thou that hast dared so many a thunder-blast
Is all thy vaunted empery so soon past?
First of the first, art thou afraid at last
To hold thy hands out first across the sea?

VI

Not for such fears God gave thee thy rich dower,
The sea-wrought sceptre and the imperial power!

Ages have poured their blood for this one hour
That thou might'st speak and set the whole world free.

VII

The poor and weak uplift their manacled hands To thee, our Mother, our Lady and Queen of lands:
Anguished in prayer before thy footstool stands Peace, with her white wings glimmering o'er the sea.

VIII

Others may shrink whose naked frontiers face
A million foemen of an alien race;
But thou, Imperial, by thy pride of place,
O, canst thou falter or fear to set them free?

IX

Thou, thou alone canst speak; thou, thou alone,
From the sure citadel of thy rock-bound throne:

Trust thy strong heart ; thine island is thine own, Girt with the thunder and lightning of the sea.

X

Fools prate of pride where butchered legions fall ;
Peace has one battle sterner than them all,
(England, on thee our ringing trumpets call !)
One battle that shall set the whole world free.

XI

Speak, speak and act ! The sceptre is in thine hand ;
Proclaim the reign of love from land to land ;
Then, come the world against thee, thou shalt stand !
Speak, with the world-wide voice of thine own
sea.

IN CLOAK OF GREY

I

Love's a pilgrim, cloaked in grey,
And his feet are pierced and bleeding;
Have ye seen him pass this way
Sorrowfully pleading?
Ye that weep the world away
Have ye seen King Love to-day?

II

Yea, we saw him; but he came Poppy-crowned and white of limb,
Song had touched his lips to flame,
And his eyes were drowsed and dim;
And we kissed the hours away
Till night grew rosier than the day.

III

Hath he left you? — Yea, he left us

A little while ago;

Of his laughter quite bereft us

And his limbs of snow:

We know not why he went away,

Who ruled our revels yesterday! —

IV

Because ye did not understand

Love cometh from afar,

A pilgrim out of Holy Land,

Guided by a star;

Last night he came in cloak of grey

Begging! Ye knew him not! He went his way.

A RIDE FOR THE QUEEN

QUEEN of queens, oh lady mine,

You who say you love me,

Here's a cup of crimson wine

To the stars above me;

Here's a cup of blood and gall

For a soldier's quaffing!

What's the prize to crown it all?

Death? I'll take it laughing!

I ride for the Queen to-night!

Though I find no knightly fee

Waiting on my lealty,

High upon the gallows-tree

Faithful to my fealty,

What had I but love and youth,

Hope and fame in season?

She has proved that more than truth

Glorifies her treason!

Would that other do as much?

Ah, but if in sorrow

Some forgotten look or touch

Pierce her heart to-morrow,

She might love me yet, I think;

So her lie befriends me,

Though I know there's darker drink

Down the road she sends me.

Ay, one more great chance is mine!

(Can I faint or falter?)

She shall pour my blood like wine,

Make my heart her altar,

Burn it to the dust! For, there,

What if o'er the embers

She should stoop and — I should hear —

'Hush! Thy love remembers!'

One more chance for every word Whispered to betray me,
While she buckled on my sword,
Smiling to allay me;
One more chance; ah, let me not Mar her perfect pleasure;
Love shall pay me, jot by jot,
Measure for her measure.

Faith shall think I never knew,
I will be so fervent!
Doubt shall dream I dreamed her true,
As her war-worn servant!
Whoso flouts her spotless name (Love, I wear thy token!)
He shall face one sword of flame
Ere the lie be spoken!

God, the world is white with May, (Fragrant as her bosom!)

Could I find a sweeter way Through the year's young blossom,
Where her warm red mouth on mine
Woke my soul's desire?
Hey! The cup of crimson wine,
Blood and gall and fire!

Castle Doom or Gates of Death?
(Smile again for pity!)
'Boot and horse,' my lady saith,
'Spur against the City, Bear this message!' God and she Still forget the guerdon;
Nay, the rope is on the tree!
That shall bear the burden!
I ride for the Queen to-night!

SONG

I

WHEN that I loved a maiden
My heaven was in her eyes,
And when they bent above me
I knew no deeper skies;
But when her heart forsook me,
My spirit broke its bars,
For grief beyond the sunset
And love beyond the stars.

II

When that I loved a maiden,
She seemed the world to me:
Now is my soul the universe,
My dreams — the sky and sea!

There bends no heaven above me,
No glory binds or bars
My grief beyond the sunset,
My love beyond the stars.

III

When that I loved a maiden,
I worshipped where she trod;
But, when she clove my heart, the cleft
Set free the imprisoned god;
Then was I King of all the world!
My soul had burst its bars
For grief beyond the sunset
And love beyond the stars.

EVE'S APPLE

I

WHEN you leant thro' the leaves with your slow red smile and your ivory body bare, Ah, what was the fruit you gathered that day, white Eve with the dusky hair?
For we took it and ate it together and laughed!
Your white teeth bit to the core.
There was little to leave for the doves to peck, when our delicate feast was o'er.

II

The ripe fruit breathed of kisses, you said, as your breasts' white apples may;
But your body was cold from the coils of the snake when you came to my arms that day:

There was blood, red blood on our lips, white Eve, as we nibbled away in the sun;
But I knew that the fruit was my heart, white Eve,
The red rent core of my heart, white Eve,
Which we gnawed and left for the rats, white Eve, when our delicate feast was done.

RECOLLECTIONS OF A SONG

I

'Come to me in my dreams!' — how oft With eyes how kind and voice how soft,
I heard thee sing, at fall of day,
The scholar poet's tenderest lay.

* * * * *

II

But oh, come not to me; for then
The dear dead love will stir again;
And when the cold light bids me wake
With each new day my heart will break.

III

Come not in dreams; how could I bear Once more to feel thy love so near,
And dream it true, yet inly know What bitter treachery lurked below?

IV

Come not, as thou will come, despite All prayers, in watches of the night,
With eyes made bright by foolish tears
And fleeting gleams of happier years.

V

Come not, as thou hast come of old,
To flood a sunless world with gold,
Or, with the mockery of a smile,
Cheat me to dream thee kind awhile.

VI

Come not, as thou so oft didst come,
When sorrow made me blind and dumb,
To lay false lips on mine and say
'Sweet love can never pass away.'

*Come not in dreams to me; for then
The dear dead love will stir again;
And, when the cold light bids me wake,
With each new day my heart will break.*

E TENEBRIS

I

Into the keeping of death
I commend my love,
Into the gloom of the grave
And the lasting sleep!
Yet there is hope, one saith,
In some glory above,
For the broken, the broken wave
That is lost in the deep.

II

O, I know not their meaning at all,
They speak idly to me,
Who say that the lost things return
As day followeth night!

I watch the leaves fall
And waves break on the sea,
And the strange skies that burn
With the stranger day's light.

III

Shall I care if another day greet me
In crimson and gold,
Though the skies be still blue
When the eyes that were kind Flash no longer to meet me
As of old, as of old,
With a love that was true,
Or a dream that was blind?

IV

I have no hope, no faith,
No desire any more,
That the last year's flower
Should return to the spray:

'Spring cometh, spring cometh,' one saith;

But who shall restore

Just the one perished hour

Of that one perished May?

SONNET

Love, when the great hour knelled for thee and me,

The great hour that should prove thee false or true,

When life surged round us like a wintry sea
And thy heart feared to say what both hearts knew;

When all thy vows and honeyed words were proven

False to the core of thy poor treacherous heart;

When by God's fire my heart's false heaven was cloven

And, white and dumb, our torn souls turned to part;

O, never think — for all the flash and thunder
That showed us the dead body at our feet,

Though heaven and hell conspired our souls to sunder

And though we twain in hell nor heaven shall meet,

Think not, where'er Love's clay-wrought idols lie,

The Love to which I prayed through these can die.

THE REAL DANTE

I

O LOVE, Love, Love, Death robbed me unaware, Undreaming that we ne'er should meet again,
Else had one soul's infinity of pain
Moated thee round with waves for Hell to dare.
Yea, in that fight, even now, might I but share, Poor craven I, who yet on earth remain,
Heaven, heaven itself should menace us in vain,
Thy heart on mine, my lips upon thine hair.

I have lost courage, Love, in losing thee,
Courage to bear this wonder of the sky,
Courage to front that dark Eternity,
Courage to brook life's pitiful riddle — Why,
Why hath God hurt us thus? Poor broken cry Quivering, unanswered, o'er the world's wide sea!

II

And thou art sleeping on that silent shore !
And thou can'st never, never, once return !
Not though the starved heart strain to thee and yearn,
And the lame hands reach upward and implore,
And the wrenched lips reiterate, o'er and o'er,
One thought wherewith the pitiless planets burn,
One lesson life is all too short to learn,
One simple sob of the soul — No more, no more !

My life shall never learn it ! Come thou back,
O, give the lie to all this dust hath said !
Come, let the stars retrace their shining track,
Steal from that solemn midnight of the dead !
Though as a dream thou canst but pass me by,
Come, give my heart the strength to break and die.

A PRAYER

ONLY a little, O Father, only to rest

Or ever the night come and the Eternal sleep,

Only to rest for a little, a little to weep

In the dead love's pitiful arms, on the dead love's breast,

A little to loosen the frozen fountains, to free

Rivers of blood and tears that should slacken the pulse

Of this pitiless heart and appease these pangs that convulse

Body and soul! O, out of Eternity,

A moment to whisper, only a moment to tell

My dead, my dead, what words are so helpless to say—

The dreams unuttered, the prayers no passion could pray —

And then, the eternal sleep or the pains of hell,

I could welcome them, Father, O gladly as ever a child

Laying his head on the pillow might turn to his rest

And remember in dreams, as the hand of the mother is prest

On his hair, how the Pitiful blessed him of old and smiled.

OLD JAPAN AT EARL'S COURT

I

Of old Japan — how far away! —
We dreamed — how long ago! —
We saw by twisted creek and bay
The blue plum-blossoms blow,
And dragons coiling down below
Like dragons on a fan,
And pig-tailed sailors lurching slow Thro' streets of old Japan.

II

Who knows that land — that dim blue day
Where white tea-roses grow?
Only a penny all the way
They cry in Pimlico:

The busses rumble to and fro,
Ah, catch one if you can,
And see the paper-lanterns glow
Thro' streets of old Japan.

III

What need we more than youth and May
To make our Miyako?
A chuckle from the cherry spray
A cherub's mocking crow,
A sudden twang, a sweet swift throe
As Daisy trips by Dan,
And careless Cupid drops his bow
And laughs — from old Japan.

*And there the cherry bough shall sway
The peach-bloom shed its snow,
With scents and petals strewn astray Till night be sweet enow:*

180      OLD JAPAN AT EARL'S COURT

Then lovers wander, whispering low

As lovers only can

Where rosy paper lanterns glow

Through streets of old Japan.

OXFORD REVISITED

TIMID and strange, like a ghost, I pass the familiar portals,

Echoing now like a tomb, they accept me no more as of old;

Yet I go wistfully onward, a shade thro' a kingdom of mortals

Wanting a face to greet me, a hand to grasp and to hold.

Hardly I know as I go if the beautiful City is only Mocking me under the moon, with its streams and its willows agleam,

Whether the City of friends or I that am friendless and lonely,

Whether the boys that go by or the time-worn towers be the dream;

Whether the walls that I know, or the unknown fugitive faces,
Faces like those that I loved, faces that haunt and waylay,
Faces so like and unlike, in the dim unforgettable places,
Startling the heart into sickness that aches with the sweet of the May, —

Whether all these or the world with its wars be the wandering shadows!
Ah, sweet over green-gloomed waters the may hangs, crimson and white;
And quiet canoes creep down by the warm gold dusk of the meadows Lapping with little splashes and ripples of silvery light.

Others like me have returned: I shall see the old faces to-morrow,

Down by the gay-coloured barges, alert for the throb of the oars, Wanting to row once again, or tenderly jesting with sorrow
Up the old stairways and noting the strange new names on the doors.

Is it a dream? And I know not nor care if there be an awaking Ever at all any more, for the years that have torn us apart,
Few, so few as they are, will ever be rending and breaking:
Sooner by far than I knew have they wrought this change for my heart!

Well; I grow used to it now! Could the dream but remain and for ever,
With the flowers round the grey quadrangle laughing as time grows old!

For the waters go down to the sea, but the sky still gleams on the river!

We plucked them — but there shall be lilies, ivory lilies and gold.

And still, in the beautiful City, the river of life is no duller,

Only a little strange as the eighth hour dreamily chimes,

In the City of friends and echoes, ribbons and music and colour,

Lilac and blossoming chestnut, willows and whispering limes.

Over the Radcliffe Dome the moon as the ghost of a flower

Weary and white awakes in the phantom fields of the sky:

The trustful shepherded clouds are asleep over steeple and tower,

Dark under Magdalen walls the Cher like a dream goes by.

Back, we come wandering back, poor ghosts, to the home that one misses

Out in the shelterless world, the world that was heaven to us then,

Back from the coil and the vastness, the stars and the boundless abysses,

Like monks from a pilgrimage stealing in bliss to their cloisters again.

City of dreams that we lost, accept now the gift we inherit —

Love, such a love as we knew not of old in the blaze of our noon,

We that have found thee at last, half City, half heavenly Spirit,

While over a mist of spires the sunset mellows the moon.

EARTH'S IMMORTALITIES

I

No more, proud singers, boast no more!
Your high immortal throne
Will scarce outlast a king's!
Time is a sea that hath no shore
Wherein Death idly flings
Your fame like some small pebble-stone
That sinks to rise no more.

*Then boast no more, proud singers,
Your high immortal throne!*

II

This earth, this little grain of dust,
Drifting among the stars,
With her invisible wars,
Her love, her hate, her lust,

This microscopic ball
Whereof you scan a part so small Outlasts but little even your own poor dust.

*Then boast no more, proud singers,
Your high immortal throne!*

III

That golden spark of light must die,
Which now you call your sun,
Soon will its race be run Around its trivial sky:
What hand shall then unroll
Dead Maro's little golden scroll When earth and sun in one wide charnel lie?

*Boast no more, proud singers!
Your high immortal throne
Will scarce outlast a king's.*

THE TESTIMONY OF ART

As earth, sad earth, thrusts many a gloomy cape
    Into the sea's bright colour and living glee,
    So do we strive to embay that mystery
Which earthly hands must ever let escape;
The Word we seek for is the golden shape
    That shall express the Soul we cannot see,
    A temporal chalice of Eternity
Purple with beating blood of the hallowed grape.

Once was it wine and sacramental bread Whereby we knew the power that through Him smiled
    When, in one still small utterance, He hurled
The Eternities beneath his feet and said
    With lips, O meek as any little child,
    Be of good cheer, I have overcome the world.

SONG

I

Nymphs and naiads, come away,
    Love lies dead!
Cover the cast-back golden head,
Cover the lovely limbs with may,
    And with fairest boughs of green
And many a rose-wreathed brier spray;
    But let no hateful yew be seen Where Love lies dead.

II

Let not the quean that would not hear (Love lies dead!)
Or beauty that refused to save
    Exult in one dejected tear;

But gather the glory of the year,
The pomp and glory of the year,
The triumphing glory of the year,
    And softly, softly, softly shed
Its light and fragrance round the grave
    Where Love lies dead.

REMEMBRANCE

O UNFORGOTTEN lips, grey haunting eyes, Soft curving cheeks and heart-remembered brow,

It is all true, the old love never dies,
And — parted — we must meet for ever now.

We did not think it true! We did not think Love meant this universal cry of pain,
This crown of thorn, this vinegar to drink,
This lonely crucifixion o'er again.

Yet, through the darkness of the sleepless night,
Your tortured face comes meekly answering mine;
Dumb, but I know why those mute lips are white,

Dark, but I know why those dark lashes shine.

O Love, Love, Love, and what if this should be

For ever now, through God's Eternity?

UNITY

I

HEART of my heart, the world is young;
Love lies hidden in every rose!
Every song that the skylark sung
Once, we thought, must come to a close:
Now we know the spirit of song,
Song that is merged in the chant of the whole,
Hand in hand as we wander along,
What should we doubt of the years that roll?

II

Heart of my heart, we cannot die!
Love triumphant in flower and tree,
Every life that laughs at the sky Tells us nothing can cease to be:

One, we are one with a song to-day,
    One with the clover that scents the wold,
One with the Unknown, far away,
    One with the stars, when earth grows old.

III

Heart of my heart, we are one with the wind, One with the clouds that are whirled o'er the lea,
One in many, O broken and blind,
    One as the waves are at one with the sea!
Ay! when life seems scattered apart,
    Darkens, ends as a tale that is told,
One, we are one, O heart of my heart,
    One still one, while the world grows old.

JOY AND PAIN

BELOVÉD, I could not tame thy wild bright wings!

Thy flight was like a seabird's down the skies:
I could but catch the brightness of thine
eyes;

And then — the wind that buffets, the spray that stings

And lashes and blinds a shore that only rings With the elemental storms bore down my cries,

And where the clotted foam in fury flies
Thou hadst flown rejoicing in all cruel things.

I know thee now, Belovéd, for thou art come With blood-stained breast into my fostering hand!

O weary wings that have come home again,
O beating heart where every song lies dumb,
O wounded bird, at last I understand,
I understand those wild bright eyes of pain.

IN THE COOL OF THE EVENING

I

In the cool of the evening, when the low sweet whispers waken,
When the labourers turn them homeward, and the weary have their will,
When the censers of the roses o'er the forest-aisles are shaken
Is it but the wind that cometh o'er the far green hill?

II

For they say 'tis but the sunset winds that wander thro' the heather, Rustle all the meadow-grass and bend the dewy fern:

They say 'tis but the winds that bow the reeds in prayer together,
And fill the shaken pools with fire along the shadowy burn.

In the beauty of the twilight, in the Garden that He loveth,
They have veiled his lovely vesture with the darkness of a name!
Thro' His Garden, thro' His Garden, it is but the wind that moveth, No more! But O the miracle, the miracle is the same.

IV

In the cool of the evening, when the sky is an old story,
Slowly dying, but remembered, ay, and loved with passion still . . .

IN THE COOL OF THE EVENING 149

Hush! . . . the fringes of His garment, in the fading golden glory Softly rustling as He cometh o'er the far green hill.

THE COTTAGE OF THE KINDLY LIGHT

THERE is a valley of fir-woods in the West
That slopes between great mountains to the sea.
Once, at the valley's mouth, a cottage stood:
Its ruins remain, like boulders of a rock,
High on the hill, whose base is white with foam.
To its forsaken garden sometimes come Lovers, who lean upon its grass-grown gate
And listen to the sea-song far below;
Or little children, with their baskets, trip Merrily through the fir-woods and the fern,
And climb the crumbling thistle-empurpled wall Around the tangled copse, and laugh to find The hardy straggling raspberries all their own.

Round it the curlews wheel and cry all night;
And, with no other comfort than the stars

THE COTTAGE OF THE KINDLY LIGHT 151

Can faintly shed from their familiar heights
It has been patient, while the world below
Has hidden itself in darkness and in clouds
Of terror from the landward-rushing storm.
Like a small gleam of quartz in a great rock,
A tiny beacon in the whirling gloom,
It stood and gathered sorrow from the world.

There, many years ago, a woman dwelt,
A sailor's widow with her only son;
And ever as she hugged him to her heart
In those glad days when he was but a child,
Her memories of one black eternal night
When she had watched and waited for the sail That nevermore returned, filled her with one Supreme, almost unbreathable, desire That this her little one, her living bliss,
The last caress incarnate of her love,
Should never leave her side; or, if he left,

152 THE COTTAGE OF THE KINDLY LIGHT

Never set forth upon the sea: her flesh
Shuddered as the sea shuddered in the sun
Over the cold grave of her first last love Even to dream of it; yet she remained Silent and passive on her sea-washed hill, Facing the sunset, in that lonely home,
Where everything bore witness to the sea, —
The shells her love had brought from foreign lands,
The model ship he built; yet she remained.
For her first kisses lingered in the scent
Of those rough wallflowers round the white-washed walls,
And the first flush of love that touched her cheek Lingered and lived and died and lived again
In the pink thrift that nodded by the gate.
As if these and her outlook o'er the sea
Were nought else but her soul's one atmosphere, Wherein alone she lived and moved and breathed,

Having no other thought but This is home,
My part in God's eternity, she still Remained. The lad grew; yet her fear was dumb.

The lad grew, and the white foam kissed his feet Sporting upon the verge: the green waves laughed

And smote their hard bright kisses on his lips
As he swam out to meet them: the whole sea,
Like some strange symbol of the spiritual deeps
That hourly lure the soul of man in quest Of beauty, pleasure, knowledge, summoned him out,

Out from the old faiths, the old fostering arms of home,

Called him with strange new voices evermore,
Called him with ringing names of high renown,
With white-armed sirens in its blossoming waves,
And heavenly cities in its westering suns;

154 THE COTTAGE OF THE KINDLY LIGHT

Called him; and old adventures filled his heart,
And he forgot, as all of us forget,
The imperishable and infinite desire Of the vacant arms and bosom that still yearn
For the little vanished children, still, still ache
To keep their children little! He grew wroth
At aught that savoured of such fostering care
As mothers long to lavish, aught that seemed To rob him of his manhood, his free-will:
And she — she understood and she was dumb.

And so the lad grew up; and he was tall,
Supple, and sunburnt, and a flower of men.
His eyes had caught the blue of sea-washed skies,
And deepened with strange manhood, till, at last,
One eve in May his mother wandered down
The hill to await his coming, wistfully Wandered, touching with vague and dreaming hands

The uncrumpling fronds of fern and budding roses

As if she thought them but the ghosts of spring.

From far below the golden breezes brought

A mellow music from the village church,

Which o'er the fragrant fir-wood she could see

Pointing a sky-blue spire to heaven: she knew

That music, her most heart-remembered song —

“Sun of my soul, thou Saviour dear,

It is not night if Thou be near!”

And as the music made her one with all

That soft transfigured world of eventide,

One with the flame that sanctified the West,

One with the golden sabbath of the sea,

One with the sweet responses of the woods,

One with the kneeling mountains, there she saw

In a tangle of ferns and roses and wild light

Shot from the sunset through a glade of fir,

Her boy and some young rival in his arms,
A girl of seventeen summers, dusky-haired,
Grey-eyed, and breasted like a crescent moon,
Lifting her red lips in a dream of love
Up to the red lips of her only son.
Jealousy numbed the mother's lonely soul,
And, sickening at the heart, she stole away.

Yet she said nothing when her boy returned;
And, after supper, she took down the Book,
Her own dead grandsire's massive wedding-gift,
The large-print Bible, like a corner-stone Hewn from the solemn fabric of his life —
An heirloom for the guidance of his sons
And their sons' sons; and every night her boy
Read it aloud to her — a last fond link Frayed and nigh snapt already, for she knew It irked him. And he read, Abide with us,
For the day is far spent; and she looked at him

Shyly, furtively. With great tears she gazed
As on a stranger in her child's new face.

At last he told her all — told of his love,
And how he must grow wealthy now and make A home for his young sweetheart, how he meant To work upon a neighbour's fishing-boat Till he could buy one for himself. He ceased; Far off the sea sighed and a curlew wailed;
A soft breeze brought a puff of wallflower scent Warm through the casement. He looked up and smiled

Into his mother's face, and saw the tears Creep through the gnarled old hands that hid her eyes.

He saw the star-light glisten on her tears!
He could not understand: her lips were dumb.

Oh, dumb and patient as our Mother Earth
Watching from age to age the silent, swift,

Light-hearted progress of her careless sons
By new-old ways to one unaltering doom,
Through the long nights she waited as of old Till in the dawn — and coloured like the dawn —
The tawny sails came home across the bar.
And every night she placed a little lamp
In the cottage window, that if e'er he gazed Homeward by night across the heaving sea
He might be touched to memory. But she said Nothing. The lamp was like the liquid light
In some dumb creature's eyes, that can but wait Until its master chance to see its love
And deign to touch its brow.

Now in those days
There went a preacher through the country-side Filling men's hearts with fire; and out at sea
The sailors sang great hymns to God; and one Stood up one night, among the gleaming nets
A-stream with silver herring in the moon,

And pointed to the lamp that burned afar
And said, 'Such is that Kindly Light we sing!'
And ever afterwards the widow's house
Was called The Cottage of the Kindly Light.

One night there came a storm up from the wild Atlantic, and a cry of fierce despair
Rang through the fishing village; and brave men Launched the frail lifeboat through a shawl-clad crowd
Of weeping women. But, high o'er the storm, High on the hill one lonely woman stood,
Amongst the thunders and the driving clouds,
Searching, at every world-wide lightning glare,
The sudden miles of white stampeding sea;
Searching for what she knew was lost, ay lost
For ever now; but some strange inward pride Forbade her to go down and mix with those Who could cry out their loss upon the quays.

160 THE COTTAGE OF THE KINDLY LIGHT

High on the hill she stood and watched alone, Confessing nothing, acknowledging nothing,
Without one moan, without one outward prayer,
Buffeted by the scornful universe,
Over the crash of seas that shook the world
She stood, one steadfast fragment of the night;
And the wind kissed her and the weeping rain.

* * * * *

But braver men than those who fought the sea
At dawn tramped up the hill, with aching hearts,
To break her loss to her who knew it all Far better than the best of them. She stood Still at her gate and watched them as they came,
Curiously noting in a strange dull dream
The gleaming colours, the little rainbow pools
The dawn made in their rough wet oilskin hats
And wrinkled coats, like patches of the sea.

‘Lost? My boy lost?’ she smiled. ‘Nay, he will come !

To-morrow, or the next day, or the next
The Kindly Light will bring him home again.'
And so, whate'er they answered, she would say —

'The Kindly Light will bring him home again;'
Until, at last, thinking her dazed with grief,
They gently turned and went.

She had not wept.

And ere that week was over, came the girl Her boy had loved. With tears and a white face
And garbed in black she came; and when she neared

The gate, his mother, proud and white with scorn, Bade her return and put away that garb
Of mourning: and the girl saw, shrinking back,
The boy's own mother wore no sign of grief,
But all in white she stood; and like a flash

The girl thought, 'God, she wears her wedding-dress !

Her grief has driven her mad !'

And all that year

The widow lit the little Kindly Light
And placed it in the window. All that year
She watched and waited for her boy's return
At dawn from the high hill-top: all that year
She went in white, though through the village streets

Far, far below, the women went in black;
For all had lost some man; but all that year
She said to her friends and neighbours, 'He will come;

He is delayed; some ship has picked him up
And borne him out to some far-distant land !
Why should I mourn the living?' And, at dusk,

As if it were indeed the Kindly Light
Of faith and hope and love, she lit the lamp
And placed it in the window.

The year passed ;

And on an eve in May her boy's love climbed
The hill once more, and as the stars came out
And the dusk gathered round her tenderly,
And the last boats came stealing o'er the bar,
And the immeasurable sea lay bright and bare
And beautiful to all infinity
Beneath the last faint colours of the sun
And the increasing kisses of the moon,
A hymn came on a waft of evening wind
Along the valley from the village church
And thrilled her with a new significance
Unfelt before. It was the hymn they heard
On that sweet night among the rose-lit fern —
Sun of my soul; and, as she climbed the hill,
She wondered, for she saw no Kindly Light

Glimmering from the window; and she thought,
'Perhaps the madness leaves her.' There the hymn,

Like one great upward flight of angels, rose
All round her, mingling with the sea's own
voice —

*'Come near and bless us when we wake,
Ere through the world our way we take, —
Till, in the ocean of Thy love,
We lose ourselves in heaven above.'*

And when she passed the pink thrift by the gate,
And the rough wallflowers by the whitewashed
wall,

And entered, she beheld the widow kneeling,
In black, beside the unlit Kindly Light;
And near her dead cold hand upon the floor
A fallen taper, for with her last strength
She had striven to light it and, so failing, died.

THE THREE SHIPS

(To an old tune.)

I

As I went up the mountain side,
The sea below me glittered wide,
And, Eastward, far away, I spied
    On Christmas Day, on Christmas Day,
The three great ships that take the tide
    On Christmas Day in the morning.

II

Ye have heard the song, how these must ply
From the harbours of home to the ports o' the sky!
Do ye dream none knoweth the whither and why
    On Christmas Day, on Christmas Day,
The three great ships go sailing by
    On Christmas Day in the morning?

III

Yet, as I live, I never knew
That ever a song could ring so true,
Till I saw them break thro' a haze of blue
    On Christmas Day, on Christmas Day;
And the marvellous ancient flags they flew
    On Christmas Day in the morning!

IV

From heights above the belfried town
I saw the sails were patched and brown,
But the flags were aflame with a great renown
    On Christmas Day, on Christmas Day,
And on every mast was a golden crown
    On Christmas Day in the morning.

V

Most marvellous ancient ships were these!
Were their prows a-plunge to the Chersonese
For the pomp of Rome or the glory of Greece

On Christmas Day, on Christmas Day?
Were they out on a quest for the Golden Fleece
On Christmas Day in the morning?

VI

And the sun and the wind they told me there
How goodly a load the three ships bear,
For the first is gold and the second is myrrh
On Christmas Day, on Christmas Day;
And the third is frankincense most rare
On Christmas Day in the morning.

VII

They have mixed their shrouds with the golden
sky,
They have faded away where the last dreams
die . . .
Ah yet, will ye watch, when the mist lifts high
On Christmas Day, on Christmas Day?
Will ye see three ships come sailing by
On Christmas Day in the morning?

I

Sleep, little baby, I love thee;
Sleep, little king, I am bending above thee!
How should I know what to sing
Here in my arms as I swing thee to sleep?
Hushaby low,
Rockaby so,
Kings may have wonderful jewels to bring,
Mother has only a kiss for her king!
Why should my singing so make me to weep?
Only I know that I love thee, I love thee,
Love thee, my little one, sleep.

II

Is it a dream? Ah yet, it seems
Not the same as other dreams!
I can but think that angels sang,
When thou wast born, in the starry sky,

And that their golden harps out-rang While the silver clouds went by!

The morning sun shuts out the stars,
Which are much loftier than the sun;
But, could we burst our prison-bars
And find the Light whence light begun,
The dreams that heralded thy birth
Were truer than the truths of earth;
And, by that far immortal Gleam,
Soul of my soul, I still would dream!

A ring of light was round thy head,
The great-eyed oxen nigh thy bed
Their cold and innocent noses bowed!
Their sweet breath rose like an incense cloud
In the blurred and mystic lanthorn light!

About the middle of the night
The black door blazed like some great star
With a glory from afar,

The widow lit the little Kindly Light
And placed it in the window. All that year
She watched and waited for her boy's return
At dawn from the high hill-top: all that year
She went in white, though through the village streets

Far, far below, the women went in black;
For all had lost some man; but all that year
She said to her friends and neighbours, 'He will come;

He is delayed; some ship has picked him up
And borne him out to some far-distant land!
Why should I mourn the living?' And, at dusk,

As if it were indeed the Kindly Light
Of faith and hope and love, she lit the lamp
And placed it in the window.

The year passed ;

And on an eve in May her boy's love climbed
The hill once more, and as the stars came out
And the dusk gathered round her tenderly,
And the last boats came stealing o'er the bar,
And the immeasurable sea lay bright and bare
And beautiful to all infinity
Beneath the last faint colours of the sun
And the increasing kisses of the moon,
A hymn came on a waft of evening wind
Along the valley from the village church
And thrilled her with a new significance
Unfelt before. It was the hymn they heard
On that sweet night among the rose-lit fern—
Sun of my soul; and, as she climbed the hill,
She wondered, for she saw no Kindly Light

Glimmering from the window; and she thought,
'Perhaps the madness leaves her.' There the hymn,

Like one great upward flight of angels, rose
All round her, mingling with the sea's own
voice —

*'Come near and bless us when we wake,
Ere through the world our way we take, —
Till, in the ocean of Thy love,
We lose ourselves in heaven above.'*

And when she passed the pink thrift by the gate,
And the rough wallflowers by the whitewashed
wall,

And entered, she beheld the widow kneeling,
In black, beside the unlit Kindly Light;
And near her dead cold hand upon the floor
A fallen taper, for with her last strength

THE THREE SHIPS

(To an old tune.)

I

As I went up the mountain side,
The sea below me glittered wide,
And, Eastward, far away, I spied
    On Christmas Day, on Christmas Day,
The three great ships that take the tide
    On Christmas Day in the morning.

II

Ye have heard the song, how these must ply
From the harbours of home to the ports o' the sky!
Do ye dream none knoweth the whither and why
    On Christmas Day, on Christmas Day,
The three great ships go sailing by
    On Christmas Day in the morning?

III

Yet, as I live, I never knew
That ever a song could ring so true,
Till I saw them break thro' a haze of blue
    On Christmas Day, on Christmas Day;
And the marvellous ancient flags they flew
    On Christmas Day in the morning!

IV

From heights above the belfried town
I saw the sails were patched and brown,
But the flags were aflame with a great renown
    On Christmas Day, on Christmas Day,
And on every mast was a golden crown
    On Christmas Day in the morning.

V

Most marvellous ancient ships were these!
Were their prows a-plunge to the Chersonese
For the pomp of Rome or the glory of Greece

On Christmas Day, on Christmas Day?
Were they out on a quest for the Golden Fleece
On Christmas Day in the morning?

VI

And the sun and the wind they told me there
How goodly a load the three ships bear,
For the first is gold and the second is myrrh
On Christmas Day, on Christmas Day;
And the third is frankincense most rare
On Christmas Day in the morning.

VII

They have mixed their shrouds with the golden
sky,
They have faded away where the last dreams
die . . .
Ah yet, will ye watch, when the mist lifts high
On Christmas Day, on Christmas Day?
Will ye see three ships come sailing by
On Christmas Day in the morning?

SLUMBER-SONGS OF THE MADONNA

PRELUDE

DANTE saw the great white Rose

Half unclosed;

Dante saw the golden bees

Gathering from its heart of gold

Sweets untold,

Love's most honeyed harmonies.

Dante saw the threefold bow

Strangely glow,

Saw the Rainbow Vision rise,

And the Flame that wore the crown

Bending down

O'er the flowers of Paradise.

Something yet remained, it seems ;

    In his dreams

Dante missed — as angels may

    In their white and burning bliss —

    Some small kiss

Mortals meet with every day.

Italy in splendour faints

    'Neath her saints !

O, her great Madonnas, too,

    Faces calm as any moon

    Glow in June,

Hooded with the night's deep blue !

What remains? I pass and hear

    Everywhere,

Ay, or see in silent eyes

    Just the song she still would sing

    Thus — a-swing

O'er the cradle where He lies.

When the year's green fire in a soul's desire Is brought like a rose to the birth;
And knights ride out to adventure
As the flowers break out of the earth.

Over the sweet-smelling mountain-passes
The clouds lie brightly curled;
The wild-flowers cling to the crags and swing
With cataract-dews impearled;
And the way, the way that you choose this day
Is the way to the end of the world.

It rolls from the golden long ago
To the land that we ne'er shall find;
And it's uphill here, but it's downhill there,
For the road is wise and kind,
And all rough places and cheerless faces
Will soon be left behind.

Come, choose your road and away, away,
We'll follow the gypsy sun;

For it's soon, too soon to the end of the day,
And the day is well begun;
And the road rolls on through the heart of the May
And there's never a May but one.

There's a fir-wood here, and a dog-rose there,
    And a note of the mating dove;
And a glimpse, maybe, of the warm blue sea,
    And the warm white clouds above;
And warm to your breast in a tenderer nest
    Your sweetheart's little glove.

There's not much better to win, my lad,
    There's not much better to win!
You have lived, you have loved, you have fought, you have proved
    The worth of folly and sin;
So now come out of the City's rout,
    Come out of the dust and the din.

Come out, — a bundle and stick is all You'll need to carry along,
If your heart can carry a kindly word,
    And your lips can carry a song;
You may leave the lave to the keep o' the grave,
    If your lips can carry a song!

*Come, choose your road and away, my lad,
    Come, choose your road and away!
We'll out of the town by the road's bright crown,
    As it dips to the sapphire day!
All roads may meet at the world's end,
    But, hey for the heart of the May!
Come, choose your road and away, dear lad,
    Come choose your road and away.*

THE LIGHTS OF HOME

I

Pilot, how far from home? —

Not far, not far to-night,

A flight of spray, a sea-bird's flight,

A flight of tossing foam,

And then the lights of home! —

II

And, yet again, how far?

Seems you the way so brief?

Those lights beyond the roaring reef

Were lights of moon and star,

Far, far, none knows how far!

III

Pilot, how far from home? —

The great stars pass away

Before Him as a flight of spray,

Moons as a flight of foam!

I see the lights of home.

CREDO

I

THOU that art throned so far above

All earthly names, e'en those we deem Eternal, e'en that name of Love

Which — as one speaketh in a dream —
We whisper, ere the morning break
And the hands yearn and the heart ache,

II

O Thou that reignest, whom of old

Men sought to appease by praise or prayer;
The spirit's little gifts of gold,

The heart's faint frankincense and myrrh,
Though we — the sons of deeper days —
Can bring Thee neither prayer nor praise,

III

We have not turned in doubt aside,
Nor mocked with our ephemeral breath
The little creeds that man's poor pride Still fashions in these gulfs of death,
The little creeds that only prove Thou art so far, so far above,

IV

So far beyond all Space and Time,
So infinitely far that none,
Though by ten thousand heavens he climb Higher, shall yet be higher by one;
So far that — whelmed with light — we dare,
Father, to know that Thou art here.

Poems

With an Introduction by HAMILTON W. MABIE

Cloth, 12mo, $ 1.25 net

"Imagination, the capacity to perceive vividly and feel sincerely, and the gift of fit and beautiful expression in verse-form — if these may be taken as the equipment of a poet, nearly all of this volume is poetry. And if to the sum of these be added the indescribable increment of charm which comes occasionally to the work of some poet, quite unearned by any of these catalogued qualities of his, you have a fair measure of Mr. Noyes at his best. . . . Two considerations render Mr. Noyes interesting above most poets: the wonderful degree in which the personal charm illumines what he has already written, and the surprises which one feels may be in store in his future work. His feelings have already so much variety and so much apparent sincerity that it is impossible to tell in what direction his genius will develop. In whatever style he writes, — the mystical, the historical-dramatic, the impassioned description of natural beauty, the ballad, the love lyric, — he has the peculiarity of seeming in each style to have found the truest expression of himself." — Louisville Courier-Journal.

MR. ALFRED NOYES'S POEMS

The Flower of Old Japan

Contains also "Forest of Wild Thyme," of which the Argonaut says: "It is not only an exquisite piece of work, but it is a psychological analysis of the child-mind so daring and yet so convincing as to lift it to the plane where the masterpieces of literature dwell. It can be read with delight by a child of ten. It is put into the mouth of a child of about that age, but the adult must be strangely constituted who can remain indifferent to its haunting spell or who can resist the fascination which lies in its every page."

"We are reminded both of Stevenson—to whom Mr. Noyes pays a glowing tribute—and Lewis Carroll; yet there is no imitation; Mr. Noyes has a distinct poetic style of his own. . . . In a matter-of-fact age such verse as this is an oasis in a desert land."—Providence Journal.

"It has seemed to us from the first that Noyes has been one of the most hope-inspiring figures in our latter-day poetry. He, almost alone, of the younger men seems to have the true singing voice, the gift of uttering in authentic lyric cry some fresh, unspoiled emotion."—Post.

Mr. Richard Le Gallienne in the North American Review pointed out recently "their spontaneous power and freshness, their imaginative vision, their lyrical magic." He adds: "Mr. Noyes is surprisingly various. I have seldom read one book, particularly by so young a writer, in which so many different things are done, and all done so well. . . . But that for which one is most grateful to Mr. Noyes in his strong and brilliant treatment of all his rich material, is the gift by which, in my opinion, he stands alone among the younger poets of the day, his lyrical gift."

Lyrical and Dramatic Poems

By W. B. YEATS

In two volumes; each, $1.75 net

The two-volume edition of the Irish poet's works includes everything he has done in verse up to the present time. The first volume contains his lyrics; the second includes all of his five dramas in verse: "The Countess Cathleen," "The Land of Heart's Desire," "The King's Threshold," "On Baile's Strand," and "The Shadowy Waters."

William Butler Yeats stands among the few men to be reckoned with in modern poetry, especially of a dramatic character. The New York Sun, for example, refers to him as "an important factor in English literature," and continues:—

"'Cathleen ni Hoolihan' is a perfect piece of artistic work, poetic and wonderfully dramatic to read, and, we should imagine, far more dramatic in the acting. Maeterlinck has never done anything so true or effective as this short prose drama of Mr. Yeats's. There is not a superfluous word in the play and no word that does not tell. It must be dangerous to represent it in Ireland, for it is an Irish Marseillaise. . . . In 'The Hour Glass' a noble and poetic idea is carried out effectively, while 'A Pot of Broth' is merely a dramatized humorous anecdote. But 'Cathleen ni Hoolihan' stirs the blood, and in itself establishes Mr. Yeats's reputation for good."

The New York Herald remarks:—

"Mr. Yeats is probably the most important as well as the most widely known of the men concerned directly in the so-called Celtic renaissance. More than this, he stands among the few men to be reckoned with in modern poetry."
